Raider Review

By Phil Agee

The past week has provided unlimited opportunities for ACHS students to participate in school and community related functions.

Homecoming Week kept students at ACHS hopping as each class was out to prove that they had the most spirit. Congratulations go out to the sophomores as they edged the seniors in winning the overall competition. The seniors were not to be outdone, however, as they yelled their way to a third consecutive triumph in the spirit stick competition.

Homecoming spirit was at its peak Friday night at Bragg Stadium as the Raiders "Lit up the Knights" in a 27-8 victory. Perhaps the happiest person present at the game, however, was senior Kim Maxwell who was voted 1982 Homecoming Queen by the ACHS student body.

The weekend was also full of excitement for many students as the 10th Annual Railroad Festival was the highlight. Many ACHS clubs ran concession stands in an effort to provide spectators with food and to raise money for their organizations.

Students had several options to choose from for entertainment Saturday night. Depot Dramatics gave its presentation of "Plaza Suite" in the auditorium, while downstairs in the cafeteria, other students elected to dance the night away at the homecoming dance.

The ACHS gridders upped their record to 6-0 with Friday night's victory over Buckingham. The Raiders were third ranked in the Virginia High School League's point system while the UPI coaches poll rated the Raiders fourth out of 103 Group AA schools. The Raiders will attempt to continue their winning ways Friday night when they travel to Jefferson Forest for a district contest. The Raiderettes, who have been victims of hard luck this season, will be busy facing Altavista this Thursday night in a girls' basketball game.

Another Homecoming has once again passed for ACHS. The spirit displayed throughout the past week was tremendous. Let's not let a good thing die.
